In today's fast-paced world, the pressures on women leaders are immense, often leading to burnout and a diminished sense of self. However, the ability to maintain a strong, impactful presence in both personal and professional settings is deeply intertwined with how well we care for ourselves. This workshop is designed to empower women leaders to harness the power of presence by prioritizing self-care. The workshop will delve into the psychological, emotional, and spiritual aspects of presence, and how these elements are foundational to leading effectively and creating a lasting impact in their spheres of influence.

MIND ME 1ST

TOPIC AREA: MENTAL HEALTH AWARENESS

As a woman with a lived experience, I would like to encourage and empower women to embrace their hidden secrets and traumas that are passing through generational lines, and use them as opportunities to heal, become whole, and not just survive, but thrive. I will share my story of childhood trauma that resulted in me being diagnosed with bipolar disorder. I will share the importance of being in tune with your emotions and not allowing the battlefield of the mind to paralyze you, block you or stop you! I will also share the importance of placing a priority and value on one's mental health and the importance of loving yourself without making an apology. Information on the National Alliance on Mental Illness and resources will be provided to local communities and how to get involved.
